Community Perceptions of 911 Call Responsiveness

Over the years I've heard many complaints about 911's responsiveness in police emergencies. We deserve a system that we can trust to respond in a timely, appropriate, and professional manner. Based at a new call center on Saint Elizabeth's Hospital campus, the Office of Unified Communications receives all of DC's 911 and 311 calls. Call operators route the calls to dispatchers and the information is relayed to the appropriate responder. Breakdowns in communication can occur at many points in the process, for a number of reasons.
